

Return to collections homepage.

The Cuban Missile Crisis, 1962

Introduction | Essay | Photo Archive

Acknowledgments

Support to the Cuban Missile Crisis Project

First and foremost, the National Security Archive acknowledges the tireless efforts of the Cuban Missile Crisis Project staff:

Laurence Chang (A.B., Religion/Philosophy, Dartmouth College) directed the project from 1988 to 1990, collecting many of the documents in the set and writing the chronology, glossaries, and other research tools which appear in this guide.

Donna Rich (Ph.D. candidate in International Relations, Nitze School of Advanced International Studies, Johns Hopkins University) brought her expertise on Cuban affairs to the Archive as coordinator of the missile crisis project for over a year.

Margarita Studemeister (M.L.S., University of California at Berkeley; M.S.S., San Francisco State University) ably coordinated the multitude of tasks and individuals involved in producing this collection.

Joyce Battle (M.A., Middle Eastern Studies, Harvard University; M.L.S., Columbia University), Kerstin Harper (M.A., Foreign Affairs, University of Virginia, Charlottesville), Wendy Simmons (Ph.D., Library and Information Services, University of Maryland), and Lisa Thompson (M.L.I.S., Catholic University of America), developed the vocabulary used for the Subject Index and carefully indexed each of the documents in the collection,

David Wallace (M.L.S., State University of New York at Albany) managed the Archive's computer system, ensured that the numerous tasks necessary to generate the indexes and catalog of documents were successfully completed, and supervised the physical and electronic ordering of the documents.

Jordan Richie (M.A., Political Science, George Washington University) and Jonathan Stier (B.A., Philosophy/Religion/Political Science, James Madison University) assisted Laurence Chang in editing the cataloging database for final publication.

Peter Kornbluh (M.A. International Relations, George Washington University) helped initiate the Cuban Missile Crisis Project in 1987 and provided advice and encouragement throughout. Chris Wallace (B.A., Politics, Princeton University) contributed to the chronology and ably performed much of the basic research, particularly with regard to Soviet affairs.

The maps of Cuba and the surrounding region reproduced in these volumes were drawn by Joyce Battle.

The project benefitted from the contribution of a number of dedicated research assistants, including David Best, David Chambers, Lynda Davis, Todd Glass, Timothy Ito, and Kerstin Williams.

Many of the documents reproduced in this set were obtained pursuant to litigation brought to compel federal agencies to process Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) requests in a manner consistent with the law. In this regard, we would like to acknowledge the important contribution of Associate General Counsels David Sobel and Sheryl Walter, General Counsel Joseph Onek, and Phil Fleming, Stuart Newberger, Bob Deyling and Melissa McKenney of law firm of Crowell & Moring, Washington, D.C., as well as the Lawyers Alliance for Nuclear Arms Control.

The National Security Archive would also like to express its sincere appreciation to Joshua Reichert for the support he provided during the final stages of this project.

The Cuban Missile Crisis Project benefited from the advice, guidance, and document donations of many scholars and former U.S. government officials. The Archive is appreciative of assistance provided by Philip A. Beshany, Kai Bird, Richard Brody, John Chew, Cecil B. Currey, C. Douglas Dillon, Bernd Greiner, Raymond Hare, Jim Hershberg Max Holland, U. Alexis Johnson, James Nathan, Alex Kerr, William LeoGrande, Arthur Lundahl, John McCone, Robert McNamara, Edward McDermott, Philip Nash, Thomas Paterson, Benjamin Read, Jeff Richelson, Horacio Rivero, David A. Rosenberg, Walt Rostow, Dean Rusk, Scott Sagan, Theodore Sorensen, Paul Stares, Adlai E. Stevenson III, Jane M. Thompson, Vincent Touze, Marc Trachtenberg, David Welch, and Charles Wellborn. In particular, the Archive would like to acknowledge the support of Philip Brenner, James Blight and Raymond Garthoff, without whose assistance the Cuban Missile Crisis Project would not have been possible.

Many archivists at public and private institutions across the country have also provided invaluable research assistance, including: Joyce Bonnett, Bernard Calvacante, Michael Desmond, Alfred Goldberg, Wes Price, Ben Primer, Susan Sweeney, and Esperanza Varona. Suzanne Forbes, the Archivist for Foreign Policy materials at the John Fitzgerald Kennedy Library in Boston, was particularly generous in sharing her extensive knowledge of the documentary record of the Kennedy administration. In addition, the Archive is grateful to Princeton University, Columbia University, and the Sloan Foundation for permission to use their materials in the set.

Finally, this project would not have been possible without the Freedom of Information Act and the cooperation of dedicated access professionals in federal agencies. For their efforts in this regard, we especially wish to thank FOIA administrators William McDonald, Tony Passarella, Olga Luck, Robert Hardzog, Frank Machak, Nancy Menan, Ann Snuggs, H. Eugene Bovis, Alice Ritchie and Frederick Smith, Jr. In addition, the Archive would like to express its appreciation to the individuals who reviewed and declassified many of the documents contained in this set: T.W. Ainsworth, Robert D. Barber, John Brogan, Zbigniew Brzezinski, J. Burke, Pratt Byrd, J.M. Cook, Jeanne Davis, Megan Desnoyers, J. Eaves, Marilla B. Guptil, J. Harper, John Hartsdorf, M.J. Heffenly, J.W. Hook, M. Hornblow, Robert B. Houston, J.L. Mills, Elijah Kelly, Nancy Menan, S. Moskowitz, James O'Neill, J. Prechowicz, Brenda Reger, W.W. Rhodes, T. Selling, Frederick Smith, Jr., J.L. Smith, J.D. Stoddart and R.B. Tiffany.

Support to the National Security Archive

For an overview of the National Security Archive and information about its funders and support, visit http://www.gwu.edu/~nsarchiv/nsa/the_archive.html.

*Data Copyright © 2001 The National Security Archive
Software Copyright © 2001 ProQuest Information and Learning Company
All Rights Reserved*